PROGRAM NOTE

Every human being will triumph over some form of adversity during their life. John M. Pasternak's "Again We Rise" was written to inspire others that are facing that very challenge. This breathtaking and significant work is written to remind and motivate us to push through our hardships. We can accomplish anything to which we aspire and dedicate our total hearts and minds.

NOTES TO CONDUCTOR

Dynamics are crucial throughout this entire piece. When the band crescendos, please insure they don't reach anything above a mezzo forte unless notated.

The beginning to measure 32 should be played in a legato style. Measure 33 begins the apex of the work and grows until measure 39. The saxophones, bassoons, and horns must be present and audible during this section of the piece.

As the piece tapers back down dynamically, the style returns to legato. Strive to return to the opening "distant and quiet" feel. At measure 53, the Clarinet 1 and Horn sections should stagger breathe with no audible breaks in their pitch and tone.

I hope you and the band find the beauty, warmth and hope that was intended in "Again We Rise." I wish you a wonderful and very successful performance!
